AGIS

What is AGIS?
- AGIS is a Australian law journal database
- AGIS also contains other material such as law reform reports and government papers.

Where can I find AGIS?

How do I search AGIS?
Type keywords or an article title into the search box. Use connectors when searching such as AND/OR. You can also type in a phrase e.g. Administrative law Australia.

Select ‘Full text only’ to limit your search to documents that have a full text available or leave it un-ticked for a wider search which may only include an article citation.

Tip:
Choose the Advanced Search Option at the top and AGIS will assist you in using connectors. You will also be able to limit your search by year.
How do I interpret the results page?

The results give a brief abstract of the article, click on the PDF icon to access the full text.

Tip:
When you are searching AGIS you are only searching a small collection inside the Informit database. To widen your search to look at other discipines (such as social sciences and criminology) you can select ‘Change Databases’ at the top of your search to widen the collection of databases you are searching inside Informit.

How do I reference this resource?
This will depend on the type of resource you use. Use The Australian Guide to Legal Citation (AGLC) to correctly cite a journal article, government document or conference paper. You can access the AGLC on the Law Guide: http://libguides.cdu.edu.au/cdulaw
